

'You've made me a very happy lady'

Pumping up the volume

Jacqueline Wilson, 40, from Duxford, Cambridgeshire

Jacqueline suffers from polycystic ovary syndrome which has left her with thinning hair. 'I need your help,' she pleaded.

We called on Mark Glenn Hair Enhancement, which specialises in synthetic extensions for problem hair. Its expert picked out strands in natural hues of brown and copper. A scattering of blonde at the front created 'sun-kissed' highlights. They were braided on to her own hair at the root and heat-sealed, so the natural hair remained in perfect condition.

After four hours and 220 extensions Jacqueline's hair had doubled in volume. Then it was trimmed so it was impossible to tell real from fake.

Make-up artist Jo chose a covering of Clinique Perfectly Real Makeup, £17, to even out Jacqueline's skin tones, with Yves Saint Laurent Touche Eclat light-reflecting concealer, £21, just under the eyes.

Collection 2000 Mono Eyeshadow in Velvet (No 31), £1.59, along the upper lids and creamy highlighter over the brow bone gave definition to her eyes. Her lashes were coated in black mascara.

Stila Convertible Color cream blush in Petunia, £23, and a slick of Dior Addict Ultra-Shine Sheer Lipcolor in Shiniest Chestnut, £14.50, was the final touch.

Before

